I CURED THEM FREE

Let Me Cure You — I Will Send You Free Treatment.

I have a standing offer in this paper to send a free treatment to any sufferer from kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism. I have been successful with old and young. Many bed-ridden children own their present good health to me; many old people who had enlarged prostate and had to get up as many as ten times a night are now cured of too frequent desire to urinate; many men and women no longer suffer from pain in the back, terrible rheumatism, etc., since taking my remedies.

SEND FOR MY FREE TREATMENT

If you suffer from any form of kidney or bladder trouble or rheumatism, no matter how old you are or how long and severe you have had it, write me today describing your condition and let me send you a free treatment to show you I can cure you in your own home. I want to show you and your neighbors that I can and do cure these diseases. Address: DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT, P. O. Box 200, Chicago, Ill.

CRUISE OF THE "ALICE WALL"

As the Alice Wall arose majestically on her man-made wings for her initial flight from Snohomish to Hoboken, bearing the mails, a mighty cheer ascended with her. There were no passengers except two supernumeraries shipped to fill the places of any sailors who should inadvertently desert while leaping over the rail. Kabhau, the noted aeronaut, was in command, but Prof. Thayer had been commissioned by a western university to observe, in the interest of science, the psychological effect of high altitudes upon sea urchins—or the glass vessel containing them.

As the ship rapidly gained elevation, though it seemed not to make much horizontal progress, the crew became alarmed at a rumor that Kabhau had forgotten which way to turn the things that kept her from going too high. She was said to be unmanageable, and in that case would go up, up, interminably; nothing would induce her to turn her nose toward the now-distant netherworld. Utter panic, alone, deterred the crew from instant mutiny.

Ten hours out, the barometer turned upside down and tried to work that way. The mercury fell, and summer clothing became mere mosquito netting, became spider web, cut decollete, cut peek-a-boo, dwindled into puerile inadequacy.

The two substitute sailors, shivering at the taffrail, passed downward through the rent in the clouds made by the ship's passage, and grumbled. The colossal mistake was dimly visible, though diminished by distance to a petty faux pas.

"'Tis a pitiful cinder from the devil's own furnace," Tim remarked; "but there's nothing I want so much as to be upon that cinder."

"True for ye," Mike rejoined. "'Tis no more than three tons of rarefied radio-activity energetically diluted with a pint of rectified ether; but I'd give a quarter for it. Why didn't they tie a shoring to it, so when we wanted it we could trowl it up?"

"I was thinking of me fireside," said Tim, "and I want to go home. I've got cold feet, a condition superinduced by the state of the atmosphere, with reference to its relative temperature. All me life I've wanted a sled that would slide up hill, but 'tis glad I am I never had wan. What is life, anyhow? A mere misstep into a trap-shooting machine, and up ye go down to Absolute Zero! Sure, this trip makes me wish I'd met wid a fatal illness when me grandmother was a baby."

"'Tis," wailed Tim; "I don't expect to live to tell the folks at home of me sad death in mid-air on the ship that never returned, and I'm thinking I'll write a farewell letter."

"Ah!" said the professor, "speaking of letters reminds me that we must drop the mails, to be forwarded by rail to Hoboken, as we are not making any progress in that direction."

"Is Hoboken in Mars?" Mike inquired.

"No, it's 3,000 miles out, from Snohomish. York state, they call it, or Jersey; but the mails are important."

The professor procured a cork and dropped it overboard. It floated slowly downward.

"Gravity is still working," he observed.

"Bedad, thin, 'tis working backward," said Mike; "we're falling up."

Kabhau and the mail clerk brought out the pouches, and the former looked downward through a pair of binoculars. The clerk held a pouch over the rail, prepared to drop it at a word. Tim gazed wistfully at the "cinder," far, far below.

"'Tis a foine shot if they hit it," he murmured.

"Before you drop the mails," suggested Prof. Thayer, "I should like to look through the glass, Mr. Kabhau. My technical training may enable me to tell you exactly or approximately where Hoboken should be, with relation to our own position, if we are straight up from Hoboken."

"Certainly," said the aeronaut, impressed; "take it, and look in at the little end."

"Ah!" said the professor, after a scrutinizing glance; "it is as I anticipated. Owing to the rotation of the earth we have passed Hoboken backward. We shall have to wait till she turns over again, when we can deliver the mail as well as its original destination."

At that moment Kabhau placed his hand to his forehead, while a beatific expression stole over his countenance.

"I have just thought of a little expedient," he said. "We have been unable to control our elevation because we have forgotten which way to turn the little lever that pulls altitude up or down; but as the lever is so devised as to move in only one direction it now occurs to me to try that way for luck."

A touch, and the ship started home. Five minutes later the hum of a city was distinctly audible, and it became obvious that Prof. Thayer had erred, for a score of newboys were shouting:

"Hoboken evening papers! Extry! All about the safe-arrival-packet! 'Alice Wall!'"

Mike was rather confused by the excitement of arrival at a foreign city.

"There do be a rumor, Tim," he murmured, "that the Alice Wall have arrived."

In a moment, there was a flash and a concussion. Mike lay sprawling upon the deck, gazing upward.

And there was Hoboken away up above.

Whooping Cough.

This is a more dangerous disease than is generally presumed. It will be a surprise to many to learn that more deaths result from it than from scarlet fever. Pneumonia often results from it. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in many epidemics of whooping cough, and always with the best results. Delbert McKelg of Harlan, Iowa, says of it: "My boy took whooping cough when nine months old. He had it in the winter. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy which proved good. I cannot recommend it too highly." For sale by all dealers.

Lived 152 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132 and lived 20 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright, of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16-year-old boy," he writes, "after taking six bottles of Electric Bitters. For thirty years kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." They're a god-send to weak, sickly run-down or old people. Try them. 50c at all druggists.
